Burke sentenced to life in prison

By BENJAMIN JOUBERT
For The News Enterprise

Nearly two and a half hours after starting deliberations Tuesday morning, a Fort Campbell jury found Sgt. Brent Burke guilty on all counts. He was convicted of premeditated murder, felony murder, burglary, child endangerment and obstruction of justice.

The mandatory sentence is life in prison and after a period of deliberation, the possibility of parole was eliminated.

When the verdict was announced to a packed courtroom gallery, friends and family of Tracy Burke and Karen Comer gasped and said, "Thank God," and "Finally." They cried and hugged one another.

Those supporting Burke quietly wept on the opposite side of the room.

Burke sat calm and straight-faced, showing no emotion when the decision was read.

Shortly after the verdict, the court began a sentencing hearing. The prosecution called a string of witnesses who had close relationships with Tracy Burke and Karen Comer, who were shot to death in September 2007 inside Comer's home in Rineyville's LaVista Estates neighborhood.

Comer's husband, Kurt Comer, said it felt like "a hole was left" after his wife was killed.

A child therapist testified that Burke's son, who testified in civilian and military trials, suffers from post traumatic stress disorder since the shootings. He often has nightmares and flashbacks of the night that likely will continue for the rest of his life, she said.

Tracy Burke's brother, David Wilburn Jr., said his sister "loved her kids more than anything."

"It was apparent in everything she did," he said.

Fourth-graders bring famous Kentuckians to life

Students at Morningside Elementary School brought research on famous Kentuckians to life Tuesday and shared information about everyone from the first Native Americans to NBA player Tayshaun Prince.

Fourth-grade students in the classes of Roseann Thrush and Sharon Billings created a "Famous Kentuckians Living Museum" for the end of the school year. Each student depicted an influential person from the Bluegrass State and discussed their lives with fellow students who weaved their way through the "museum" in the school library.

Thrush said she wanted to prepare students for the Kentucky history lessons to come in fifth grade and she's used a variation of the living museum in the past.

"The children I feel like learn more," Thrush said. They research the person and pick one significant contribution they made to

Officials announce tribute bands for summer concert

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown will welcome three bands to Freeman Lake Park on September 28 who play tribute to a trio of iconic rock bands.

Absolute Queen, a Queen tribute band; Highway To Hell, an AC/DC tribute band; and Toys In The Attic, an Aerosmith tribute band, have been booked for the annual summer concert series, which has been moved to the fall.

Events Coordinator Sarah Vaughn said information about ticket prices and availability will be released in early July. The show starts at 7 p.m. at the Freeman Lake Park bandstand.

25th District candidates speak

Three seek Democratic nomination

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

With the primary approaching, the three Democratic candidates vying for the 25th state legislative district seat touted their credentials to voters this week.

Incumbent Rep. Jimmie Lee, Kendrick Bryan and Glenn Fonda addressed the Hardin County Democratic Woman's Club during its meeting Monday night at Nolin RECC, explaining why their services could be beneficial to Frankfort.

Bryan, 24, the youngest candidate, addressed the crowd first and said he would not kowtow to lobbyists or take money from special interests.

"I will be free to lead," he said.

Bryan, a teacher and volleyball coach at LaRue County High School, said he will promote education and civil health by hosting spelling and geography bees, mock elections, job fairs and town hall meetings while giving tours of the Capitol.

"I will open my doors to students," he said.

If elected, Bryan also said he will

North Hardin to host Night of the Arts

Event to feature music, visual arts, dramatic performances

By KELLY CANTRALL
kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

North Hardin High School faculty and students are hoping to bring a love of the arts to Hardin County.

North Hardin is hosting its first Night of the Arts from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday in the school cafeteria. The event features visual arts and musical and dramatic performances, all from students.

The school has sponsored concerts and theater productions before, but faculty members in the fine arts department were looking for a new event to showcase all facets of the arts, said James Beard, head of the fine arts department.

"We just want to build this program up," Beard said.

The event is $3, and attendees will be able to view a gallery of artwork and watch instrumental, choral and dramatic performances from students, he said.

Child care will be provided for $1.

Beard said he hopes the event will promote the arts in Hardin County and give students and families a chance to attend an event of this type. Many don't have the opportunity, he said.

The event is "a baby step in the right direction," Beard said.

Dress for the event is semi-formal or business casual and refreshments will be served.

After the event, there is a jazz and percussion band concert in Ron Bevars Gymnasium at North Hardin.

Car runs into Kumon Center

One woman injured

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

One woman was injured Monday afternoon when a car drove through the front door of the Kumon Math and Reading Center on North Dixie Avenue in Elizabethtown.

Lisa D. Addington, 44, of Elizabethtown was driving a 2008 Volkswagen Beetle through the parking lot in front of Kumon when her shoe caught on the gas pedal, according to the Elizabethtown Police Department. Addington told police the Beetle was a new vehicle to her.

When Addington tried to stop, the vehicle accelerated, traveling over the sidewalk and into the building, police said. Virgil Willoughby, EPD public information officer, said three children were in the vehicle when the crash occurred around 3:20 p.m. Monday.

Kumon co-owner Dave Peterson, who runs the center with his wife, Nikki, said about three employees and 15 students were in the building at the time. No students were injured.

"We're happy that everybody's OK," Peterson said.

Police say one patron, 62-year-old Louella S. Hatfield of Glendale, was struck when the Beetle entered the building. She was transported to Hardin Memorial Hospital with injuries to her legs, back and neck.

Peterson said Hatfield was at Kumon with her granddaughter. Before she was released by the hospital Monday evening, Peterson said he went to visit her.

Kumon was closed Tuesday and Peterson did not know when the building would be repaired. On Tuesday afternoon, he said they were in the process of preparing to reopen the education center.

Willoughby said there are no charges pending in the wreck.

Sarah Bennett can be reached at (270) 505-1750.

CLARKSON

Woman dies in crash

On the evening of her 42nd birthday, a Leitchfield woman's car ran off U.S. 62 in Grayson County, overturned several times and hit a tree before coming to rest on its hood in a creek. She was found dead the next morning.

After examining Katherine Dixon's body, Grayson County Coroner Joe Brad Hudson recorded time of death as between 1 and 3 a.m. CDT Tuesday. It's not clear when the wreck occurred or how long the car was undetected before it was reported to police at 6:15 a.m.

Authorities said Monday night Dixon left a residence in Big Clifty and was headed west toward her home on Main Street in Leitchfield. The car was found near Clarkson in the 5500 block of Elizabethtown Road, U.S. 62, according to Grayson County Sheriff Rick Clemons.

Hudson said he found no evidence of alcohol use at the scene. Dixon's body was sent to the state medical examiner's office in Louisville where an autopsy is scheduled to be performed today.

HODGENVILLE

Constable arrested

A LaRue County constable was arrested Monday on a warrant relating to a theft charge in Hardin County.

Jeffrey W. Metcalf, 40, of Hodgenville, is charged with theft by deception-cold checks and first-degree fleeing or evading police. He was lodged at the LaRue County Detention Center but since has posted bond.

According to a Kentucky State Police news release, troopers were attempting to serve a warrant at Metcalf's White City Road residence when the constable ran from the home into the woods behind it.

He later was discovered in the woods and arrested without further incident, police said.

The investigation is ongoing. The fleeing charge is a Class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison upon conviction.

AFGHANISTAN

French promoted to brigadier general

Kristin K. French, commander of the 3rd Expeditionary Sustainment Command, has been promoted from colonel to brigadier general.

French received the promotion from Maj. Gen. Patricia E. McQuiston, commanding general of the U.S. Army Sustainment Command, during a ceremony at Kandahar Air Field in Afghanistan, where she is deployed with the 3rd ESC.

French took over command of the 3rd ESC in June 2011 and is the third female general officer to lead the command, according to a news release.

"I've had very professional people work with me and I've learned so much from all of them," French said. "I really thank all of my soldiers, peers and superiors for their support throughout my years of service."

French's husband and children, several Fort Knox leaders and spouses, and members of the 3rd ESC rear detachment watched the ceremony via video teleconference at Fort Knox.

E'town reaches settlement with Cecilia couple

City to pay $90,000 after meeting with mediator

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Following a closed session Monday, Elizabethtown City Council voted to pay $90,000 to a Cecilia couple to end a dispute over who was eligible for money paid out by Kentucky Utilities for a temporary easement on the property, which the city purchased from the couple. City Attorney D. Dee Shaw said the city has been locked in an "honest dispute" with Don and Betty Cowherd over the money, which was paid by Kentucky Utilities to run a transmission line on the property. The city purchased the property from the Cowherds after accessing it for decades for gas storage.

Shaw said the city has gas wells on the property and Executive Assistant Charlie Bryant said the city has used the property for roughly 40 years. Shaw said the city agreed any money for a permanent easement requested by KU should be paid to the couple, but there was disagreement on the temporary easement. She said neither side contemplated the need for a temporary easement. Shaw said the city and the couple met with a mediator in April, who helped the two sides reach a settlement. In other business, the city approved a memorandum of agreement with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to pay $27,840 into the Indiana bat conservation fund for the Billy Creek Interceptor project, a massive sewer line which will serve the Billy Creek area south of the Elizabethtown to Radcliff connector, said City Engineer Scott Reynolds. Reynolds said the city needs to clear about 9.6 acres of trees to construct the line. Municipalities are required to pay the fee, which is charged by acre, when they remove trees around creeks because of the potential impact to the habitat of the Indiana bat, an endangered species, Reynolds said. The council reluctantly approved the agreement but described the fund as "government extortion." Council members said they do not want to delay the interceptor's construction but suggested the pursuit of an environmental study to determine if Indiana bats inhabit the area on smaller projects. The city also approved a low bid from Ken's Beverage Inc. to purchase six ice makers for the Elizabethtown Sports Park at $29,517.90 and approved an application to the Kentucky Office of Homeland Security for money to purchase body armor sets for the Hardin County Narcotics Task Force. Marty Finley can be reached at (270) 505-1762.

Shelves to aid opening of Vine Grove lending library

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

A community library might soon be open because bookshelves have been obtained for a space at Vine Grove City Hall designated for the free lending of reading materials to community members. The effort to set up the library began more than a year ago when the Vine Grove Woman's Club began collecting bookshelves and books for readers of all ages to set up in a room in the city hall. The library was expected to open soon after that, but the club had difficulty collecting enough bookshelves that fulfilled the library's needs and worked in the room where the library was planned to be set up. The Vine Grove Woman's Club is paying part of the money needed to install the bookshelves. The City of Vine Grove will pay the rest. Mayor Blake Proffitt said during the Vine Grove City Council meeting Monday night that installing the shelves should allow the library to open to the public soon. City Clerk Jackie Johnson said there are many books on site at city hall from the book drive, probably enough to fill the shelves. There is no set date for the library to open. The program is planned to operate on the honor system, eliminating the need to constantly staff the lending library or initiate a formal checkout system. Donna Betson, city council member and president of the Vine Grove Woman's Club, has said she hopes the library will foster a community atmosphere, offer those who don't want to leave town a place to get books and give people a place to donate books they don't read anymore. She also wants to help build a sense of community and encourage reading among Vine Grove residents. Books can continue to be donated at Vine Grove City Hall. Amber Coulter can be reached at (270) 505-1746.

Trial approaching for Radcliff man charged with state, federal sex crimes

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

As a June jury trial approaches, defense counsel for the Radcliff man facing 12 counts of felony sex charges allegedly involving a child has filed multiple motions. Paul Hales, 54, appeared in court Tuesday with his attorney, who requested to set a pretrial hearing to discuss the motions. The hearing has been scheduled for 1 p.m. on May 23. A former civilian contractor with Fort Knox, Hales is accused of repeatedly engaging in sexual acts with a female child under the age of 12, according to the indictment. The alleged offenses occurred between September 2010 and June 19, 2011. He faces six counts each of first-degree sodomy and first-degree sexual abuse. All 12 counts allege forcible compulsion. A police citation alleges Hales admitted to performing sexual acts with the alleged victim "25 to 30 times" at "his home, while driving and in parking lots." In addition to local charges, the defendant also faces federal charges for violating child sexual exploitation laws. A federal grand jury indicted Hales in February on charges of knowingly engaging in a sexual act with the alleged victim while on Fort Knox and possession of child pornography. According to court records, police executed a search warrant and seized computer equipment and discs which contained thousands of still images and movie files containing child pornography. Several depicted children previously identified in investigations outside Kentucky. First-degree sodomy is a Class A felony, and if convicted, he faces 20 years or life imprisonment. For the federal charges, he faces a mandatory minimum sentence of 30 years in prison. Sarah Bennett can be reached at (270) 505-1750.

UK trustees vote for tuition, fees hike

The Associated Press LEXINGTON - The University of Kentucky board of trustees has voted to increase student tuition and fees by 6 percent. The board voted Tuesday, following plans announced last month to increase tuition as state funding for postsecondary education saw a 6.4 percent cut. The Courier-Journal reports the change for in-state tuition for underclassmen will be $274, from $4,564 to $4,838, per semester in the 2012-13 academic year. Upper division students will also see costs climb from $4,696 to $4,978. University President Eli Capilouto says declining state support, research funding and endowment resources have strained the university budget, prompting the tuition increase.

Murder suspect found dead in quarry

By NICK TABOR
Kentucky New Era

Hopkinsville police detectives believe that in the hours after he stabbed his child's mother to death, T'Marcus Hall drove the woman's car about two miles north up Main Street and rolled into a quarry full of water.

A dive team commissioned by police found him dead in the car late Sunday night.

Investigators had been looking for Hall since the late afternoon. They believe that between 4:30 and 4:55 p.m., he stabbed Autumn Rollings to death. She was 24.

HPD received a call from Francesca Wilson at 5:01 p.m. The police report does not explain Wilson's relationship to Rollings and Hall, nor does it say whether she lived nearby.

Facebook posts led detectives to suspect Hall would drive his car into a quarry, said HPD spokesman Paul Ray. Officers started checking the areas surrounding local quarries.

Around 8:45 p.m., police found a section of fence broken near the quarry on Main Street, said HPD spokesman Paul Ray. They called for a dive team to search the water, and divers found Hall dead in the car, Ray said.

Police had the car drugged up and sent Hall's body off for an autopsy. Christian County Coroner Dorris Lamb said he has not yet ruled on Hall's time of death or the cause.

The homicide occurred at 208 E. 17th St., police said. Hall and Rollings had lived together there, though Hall's mother, LaRhonda Hall, said her son also had stayed with her occasionally. The couple had domestic disputes related to infidelity, LaRhonda Hall said.

She said her son told her right after Rollings' death that he'd killed her.

A neighbor took Hall and Rollings' child from their home before the attack, police said. Ray said he didn't think any state agency had taken custody of the children.

Edith L. Mitchell

Edith L. Mitchell, 70, of Vine Grove, went to heaven Monday, May 7, 2012, at Norton's Healthcare Pavilion Hospital in Louisville.

She was a native of Boston, Ky., and the former Edith Loretta Coyle. She was a CNA and a member of St. Bridget Catholic Church in Vine Grove.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Mildred F. Young and Edward Coyle.

Her survivors include her husband, Michael D. Mitchell; one daughter, Christina M. Phelps; two brothers, William E. Coyle and Ronald C. Wallace; two grandchildren; and four stepgrandchildren.

The funeral is at 10 a.m. Friday, May 11, in the chapel of Coffey & Chism Funeral Home in Vine Grove with the Rev. Daniel Lincoln officiating. Burial is in Kentucky Veterans Cemetery-Central in Radcliff.

Visitation is from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday and at 9 a.m. Friday at the funeral home.

Police: Man put rat poison in wife's coffee

Lexington Herald-Leader

A Richmond man was charged with attempted murder Sunday after he allegedly tried to kill his wife with rat poison, Richmond police said.

William Cain, 55, was lodged in the Madison County jail.

Cain's wife told police he prepared a pot of coffee and then left their home on West Walnut Street. Police recovered the pot and "found what appeared to be rat poison in the bottom," police said in a release.

Cain was found at a Fifth Street residence and was taken to the Richmond police station for questioning. After that interview, he was charged and taken to the jail.

The residue has not been confirmed as rat poison, but Richmond Police Chief Larry Brock said "we're satisfied based on the investigation we conducted that rat poison was in fact put into a coffee pot."

Ford to boost factory output by 40,000 vehicles

By TOM KRISHER
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT — Rising car and truck sales have prompted Ford Motor Co. to add a week of production at 13 North American factories so the company can make another 40,000 vehicles this year.

Ford said Tuesday it would cut in half the normal two-week summer shutdown at six assembly plants and seven engine and parts plants. Auto plants normally close for two weeks around the July 4 holiday as they switch over to make vehicles for the next model year.

Through April, U.S. auto sales ran at an annual rate of more than 14 million, substantially higher than last year's 12.8 million. Ford sales were up 5 percent. Total U.S. car and truck sales rose 10.3 percent through April to 4.65 million vehicles, according to Autodata Corp.

Many analysts are forecasting sales of about 15 million new vehicles in 2013.

At Ford, most factories have been running at capacity, and the company is adding third shifts at three plants this month to meet higher demand, said Jim Tetreault, vice president of North American manufacturing for the company.

"Requiring more capacity from our plants is a good problem to have, and having the flexibility to add a week of production in our plants goes a long way toward solving it," Tetreault said in a statement.

Factories that will work the extra week include Chicago Assembly, which makes the Ford Explorer SUV and Ford Taurus and Lincoln MKS large cars; Dearborn Truck, in Dearborn, Mich., which makes F-Series trucks; Louisville Assembly in Louisville, which makes the new Ford Escape small SUV; Kentucky Truck in Louisville, which makes heavy-duty pickups and the Lincoln Navigator and Ford Expedition big SUVs; Michigan Assembly in Wayne, Mich., which makes the Ford Focus compact; and Kansas City Assembly in Clayco, Mo., which makes F-150 pickups.

Other factories with the added week include Dearborn Engine, Chicago Stamping, Cleveland Engine No. 1, Lima Engine in Lima, Ohio; Essex Engine in Windsor, Ontario; Sterling Axle in Sterling Heights, Mich.

Ford now has the capacity to make 2.6 million vehicles in North America, but the company plans to add shifts and make other changes to push that up to 3 million this year.

N.C. votes on constitutional ban on gay marriage

By EMERY P. DALESIO
The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — The national debate over gay marriage focused Tuesday on North Carolina, as voters decided whether to make it the 30th state to pass a constitutional amendment defining marriage as solely between a man and a woman.

In the final days before the vote, members of President Barack Obama's cabinet expressed support for gay marriage and former President Bill Clinton recorded phone messages urging voters to reject the amendment. Opponents also held marches, put up television ads and gave speeches, including one by Jay Baker, son of televangelists Jim Bakker and the late Tammy Faye Bakker.

Meanwhile, supporters ran their own ad campaigns and church leaders urged Sunday congregations to vote for the amendment. The Rev. Billy Graham, who at age 93 remains influential even though his last crusade was in 2005, was featured in full-page newspaper ads supporting the amendment.

Both sides spent a combined $3 million on their campaigns.

Experts expect the measure to pass, despite the state's history of moderate politics.

North Carolina law already bans gay marriage, like nine other states, but an amendment would effectively slam the door shut on same-sex marriages.

Six states — all in the Northeast except Iowa — and the District of Columbia allow same sex marriages.

The North Carolina amendment was placed on the ballot after Republicans took over control of the state legislature after the 2010 elections, a role the GOP hadn't enjoyed for 140 years.

Joe Easterling, who described himself as a devout Christian, voted for the amendment at a polling place in Wake Forest.

"I know that some people may argue that the Bible may not necessarily be applicable, or it should not be applicable, on such policy matters. But even looking at nature itself, procreation is impossible without a man and a woman. And because of those things, I think it is important that the state of North Carolina's laws are compatible with the laws of nature but, more importantly, with the laws of God."

Recalling Maurice Sendak's 'dark and clear-eyed view'

By HILLEL ITALIE
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — Maurice Sendak's closest friends gathered in his hospital room — playwright Tony Kushner, authors Brian Selznick and Gregory Maguire. Kushner brought jellybeans, while Maguire placed a picture of Lewis Carroll on the table beside Sendak's bed.

"The one thing he was not uncertain about was his significance," Maguire said Tuesday, hours after Sendak died at age 83. A monument of 20th century children's literature, Sendak suffered a stroke last week and spent his remaining days hospitalized.

"He always identified with his heroes from the past and felt like they spoke to him and encouraged him to do brilliant work. So I thought I would give Maurice a glimpse of the people waiting for him on the other side."

Sendak, among the most honored and adored children's authors, ranks with Dr. Seuss as a revolutionary force of the past half-century. He told stories about children that were about children, not what adults wished them to be. He inspired every author who wanted to go a little too far.

"It's almost impossible to overstate his importance," said Handler, known for the Lemony Snicket "Series Of Unfortunate Events" books. "He's a North Star in the firmament of anyone who makes children's books, in particular for his dark and clear-eyed view of the world that was kindred to me when I was in kindergarten and kindred to me now. He gives neither the comfort nor the horror of sentimentality."

Count military where they live

ISSUE: How the Census counts service membersOUR VIEW: Give communities credit for deployed

The Census should not short change communities, especially not military communities, say U.S. Sen. Rand Paul and U.S. Reps. Ed Whitfield and Brett Guthrie.

The three late last month introduced the Services Members and Communities Act of 2012, a move to change the way deployed service members are counted in the national census taken once every 10 years.

They want troops included in totals for areas where they actually live, giving a better picture of the population and providing the communities surrounding installation such as Fort Knox and Fort Campbell credit for the deployed residents.

Troops living on or off a military installation outside the United States or on a military vessel with a foreign homeport — including those on deployment — are counted as part of the U.S. overseas population, according to a U.S. Census Bureau spokeswoman.

That means, if a census were conducted today, the roughly 250 deployed members of the 3rd Expeditionary Sustainment Command would be considered living overseas, and Kentucky would lose out on counting them.

These troops don't live in Afghanistan. And even if we convinced ourselves they did live there, it's not by choice. They're on temporary duty in service of their country. They'll be there a fraction of the time the Census is meant to represent.

This editorial represents a consensus of The News-Enterprise editorial board.

sent. And, we hope and pray, they're all coming home.

The places they call home need credit for them. As the act's sponsors have noted, communities provide services to their military populations. Consider even the most visible services — fire departments, roads, schools, sewer systems.

Deployments during a Census year basically penalize cities and states with significant military populations. And it's a disadvantage that lasts a decade.

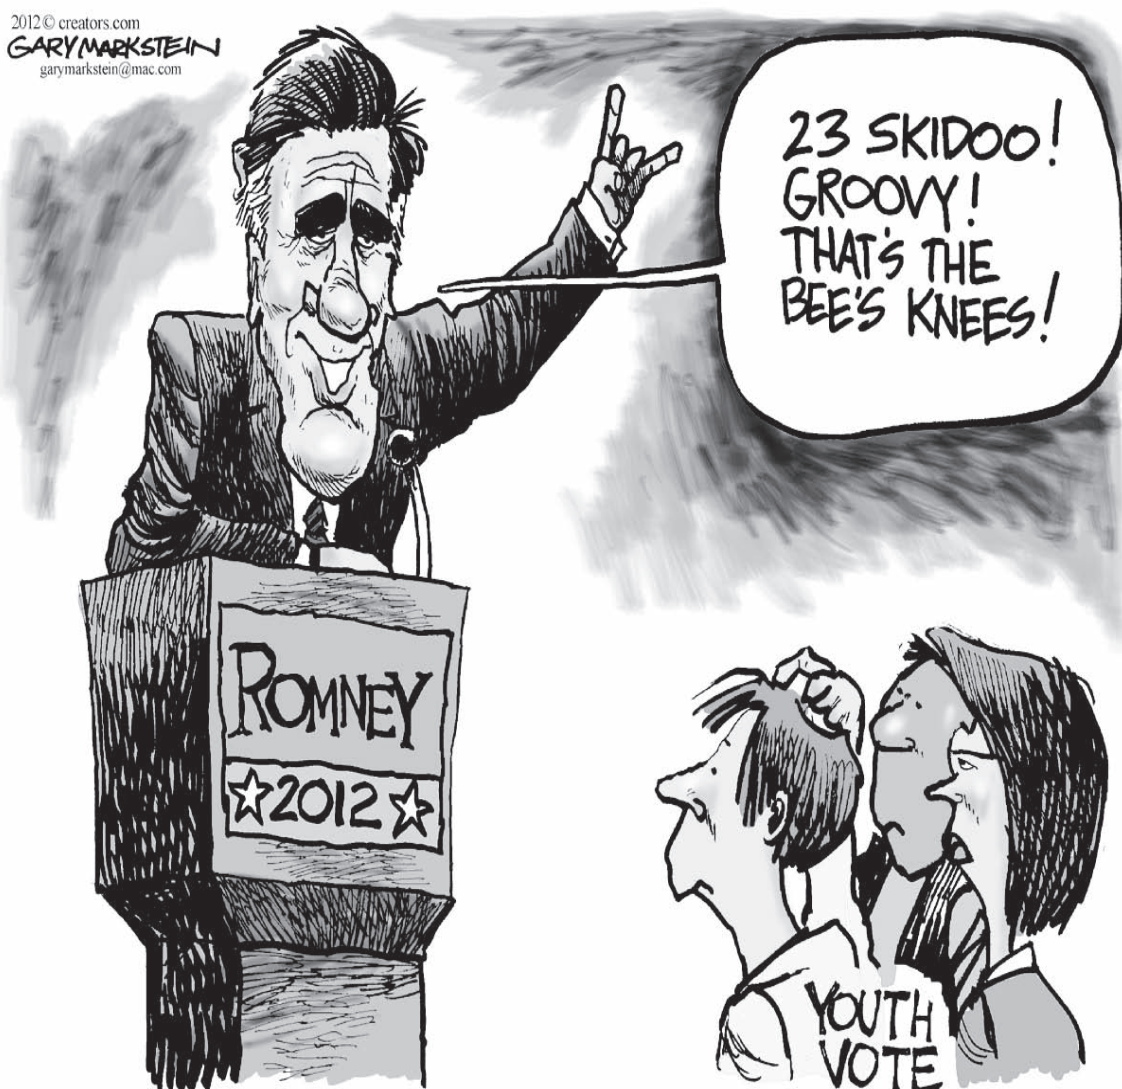

As Paul noted during a recent visit to Elizabethtown, there are lost business opportunities as, for example, retail stores might skip over a post town because the population reflected in the Census didn't meet that company's potential customer threshold.

But more importantly, communities are missing out on federal benefits for which population, as reflected in the Census, is part of the formula.

When the 2010 Census was under way, the bureau noted that local governments should receive $350 to $400 per person over the following 10 years.

Local communities provide vital services. It's a mistake to ask military communities to do as well as other communities when something as honorable as the patriotic duty of our armed forces knocks them off a level playing field.

But it's a correctable mistake. We're eight years from the next national census and that ought to be plenty of time to right the wrong.

Letter carriers commit to upcoming food drive

On Saturday, all post offices in Hardin County will team up with the National Association of Letter Carriers' Stamp Out Hunger food drive to provide food for those in our area dealing with hunger everyday.

Celebrating its 20th anniversary this year the Stamp Out Hunger food drive is the nation's largest single day food drive, having collected more than 1 billion pounds of food since its inception in 1993. In 2011, Americans donated 70.2 million pounds of food, which marked the eighth consecutive year that at least 70 million pounds was collected.

Despite the generosity of Hardin County postal patrons who have supported the food drive in previous years, the need for food assistance locally has never been greater. Many of our neighbors are having to make the difficult choice of paying a utility bill or purchasing food. Children who lack transportation will not be able to take advantage of summer school food programs and seniors older than age 65 are having to decide between paying for food and paying for medicine.

Because of an extraordinary initiative this year, all of Hardin County's city letter carriers and our valued "post offices on wheels," rural letter carriers, join together with other postal employees, their families, retirees and volunteers to make this year's food drive the largest in our local 20-year history of the event.

To the farthest northern part of our county in West Point, where donated food will benefit the weekly meal provided by Baker Masonic Lodge, to the south in Upton where the food will replenish the food ministry of local Christian ra-

Give Obama credit for bin Laden raid

So, if you were the president, would you have pulled the trigger on the raid that killed Osama bin Laden? Are you sure?

Republican candidate Mitt Romney is certain that he would have and, in fact, he says, the decision to go was so clear-cut that even Jimmy Carter would have launched the raid.

But a couple of clichés are called for: The decision to strike was not, by any means, the kind of no-brainer that Romney suggests, and the raid's outcome was far from a slam-dunk.

Furthermore, the gratuitous slap at Carter doesn't quite make sense. Carter mounted Operation Eagle Claw in 1980 in an attempt to rescue 52 American hostages in

JOHN CRISP

Tehran. The mission, much more difficult and complicated than the bin Laden raid, was undone by weak planning and bad luck. But no one can fault Carter for insufficient courage or audacity.

Eagle Claw's failure had a lot to do with making Carter a one-term president, which should remind us of how much President Barack Obama had at stake. He was risking not only the lives of soldiers and civilians, but also the prestige and credibility of the United States and, really, his presidency.

I'm not fond of extra-judicial assassinations, even of non-Americans, but let's face it: If anyone had one coming, it was Osama bin Laden.

OBL wasn't a madman, and I don't like using terms like "evil" to describe motivations that can be explained in rational terms.

But the fact that OBL had his reasons for attacking the United States on 9/11 doesn't release him from the consequences. His attacks were outrageous, his victims were innocent and he was still a dangerous, motivated threat. Vengeance may be the Lord's, but sometimes he relies on humans to do the right thing.

Republicans don't mention George W. Bush much these days, but he's been resurrected in the attempt to absorb some credit for the groundwork behind the raid that got bin Laden. But Bush, distracted by Iraq, appears to have lost interest in OBL during the decade that followed 9/11. In any case, he didn't get the job done. Obama did.

Would Romney have launched the raid? No one, not even Romney, really knows the answer to that question. Neither does Obama.

But the heat that the president has endured over a recent campaign ad that suggests Romney wouldn't have launched the raid is overwrought. Some have called the ad unpresidential, and the Boston Herald published a cartoon depicting Obama wondering why anyone would politicize the OBL raid as he sports a T-shirt that features a picture of OBL and a caption that reads, "If I were alive, I'd vote for Romney."

If the Obama campaign ad was a tad over the top, surely it's excusable in the hyper-political atmosphere the president has endured for the last three years, one that has attempted to deflect well-deserved credit for the bold OBL raid onto everyone except the president.

Of course, plenty of other people deserve credit, as well. A year later, all of them still merit a victory lap. If the raid had gone wrong, apart from the casualties, Obama would have fallen farthest and hardest. But the raid went exquisitely right, with a result that both the left and the right should feel good about.

With regard to who gets credit, Obama's been a glory-hog only in the eyes of those who are looking for any opportunity to detract from his record.

So let's give the president a break on the OBL raid. So what if one of his finest accomplishments is lightly tinged with politics? That's not exactly news.

Besides, here's a relevant quote. It's been attributed to many others, but I like the version that puts it in the mouth of St. Louis Cardinals baseball legend Dizzy Dean, who said, reportedly: "It ain't bragging if you can do it."

American exceptionalism in generosity

I took a walk the other morning. As walks go, it wasn't particularly long, just 5 kilometers, or about 3 miles for those who, like me, weren't raised on the metric system. But it was far more important than most of my other walks.

What made this stroll different from my usual daily exercise was the fact that I wasn't alone and wishing the ordeal would be over sooner than later and it was for just more than my own benefit. I have to confess that some of those around me, including my 16-year-old granddaughter, actually ran. They finished this "Race for Hope" long before I straggled across the finish line.

This is an annual event to honor those who have survived brain cancer and those who haven't, which is far more than have. And on this pleasantly cool May morning with the U.S. Capitol shining in the distance, 12,000 or so of us lined up on Pennsylvania Avenue to run or walk for someone else and not just for our own self-indulgence.

The race raises money in the hopes of finding a cure for one of those awful things that, when diagnosed, strike fear in people of all ages and their loved ones. After all, the brain is such a mystery to most of us that any intimation that its synapses will be interrupted in any form is horrible to contemplate. It happened to me almost four years ago when Lisa Fitchett was given the scary news of a brain tumor.

But Lisa is one of those tough, vibrant souls who are undaunted by adversity and are always determined to persevere no matter the circumstances. Those qualities have made her a success in everything she has done — school, athletics, career, wife and motherhood ... and just plain life. This, of course, is being said by a father who has never had a moment's lack of pride in her.

This trial was no exception, and as time passed her medical reports were excellent. She decided to form a team for raising money to help fight the good fight and enlisted family and friends, from both on and off the soccer field, to help her.

Has this event made any difference?

The proof that it has is seen in the number of actual survivors participating. Those men, women — like Lisa — and children, with the yellow balloons proudly tied to their wrists as winners in the struggle, have grown dramatically in the 15 years since the first race took place. Their presence at the head of the throng waiting to begin the march was nothing less than inspirational.

This year alone, the Race for Hope raised more than $2 million for research, and at least one team provided in excess of $100,000. Lisa's team of "Fitchett's Friends," with a female soccer player and a slogan of "kicking cancer" stenciled on the front of her team T-shirt, hasn't raised that much yet. But out of hundreds of teams, it did manage to rank in the top 50. We all proudly wore the blue shirt, including her mother, who couldn't walk but waited patiently.

There are a number of these affairs. The day before, the Washington side-walks had been crowded with women and men in various displays of pink to fight breast cancer. No one complains about the disruption to traffic or the momentary inconvenience to commerce.

As I walked along in the shadow of the dome that has become the world's beacon for freedom, I couldn't help think that most Americans truly are a generous lot, even those without much. They are special in a world that too often thinks of them as callous, arrogant and pampered. That is the case despite the fact that millions upon millions of Americans are dedicated to helping others when needed at home and abroad.

That may be considered gross sentimentality in a cynical world, but I still believe it. Many of my fellow participants in this event were there because they had lost someone and didn't want others to have to bear that pain.

I thought of my mother, who cried every time she saw an underfed or inadequately dressed child and acted on it. If there is such a thing as the American spirit, this is where it lies.

Wind down 'War on Terror'

It is late April, and as America's president you are about to be reacquainted with the buck-stopping burden of working at the narrow end of the vast global funnel that dumps all that is known and menacing about terrorism threats in your inbox.

You are planning your secret trip to Afghanistan, where you will announce America's historic commitment to pull all combat troops by 2014 — but still keep the United States very involved in the Afghan war. You will keep military trainers and advisers on the ground and provide unspecified big-time funding until at least 2024. It's a necessary step, you plan to say, to prevent terrorists from establishing safe havens in Afghanistan from which to attack America's homeland.

Then comes alarming new intelligence about a terror plot — and it has nothing to do with Afghanistan.

Terrorists from al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP), operating in havens in Yemen that have seemed far too safe for far too long, are said to have perfected a hard-to-detect nonmetallic bomb. They are preparing to blast a jetliner out of the sky. Maybe any day now.

The same Yemen-based bomb-maker who designed the so-called Underwear Bomber's device, AQAP's Ibrahim

MARTIN SCHRAM

Hassan al-Asiri, reportedly designed this device. He is still at large. Intelligence agents are keeping the bomb under surveillance in the Middle East country (not Yemen) where it has been assembled. They want to learn as much as possible about the terrorists' potential plans — but still be able to prevent the attack.

The timing is hardly ideal. As you prepare to secretly fly to Afghanistan to announce a new stage in the only real (but never officially declared) war we are still waging, you will be speaking about steps to keep us safer at home. But you also will be watchful of this frightening Yemen-based threat you will carefully not mention.

On April 30, just a day before you fly to Afghanistan, The Washington Post reports on Page 1 that CIA drones hit targets inside Pakistan — reportedly killing four terrorists tied to al-Qaida who had taken over a girls' school in the tribal lands of North Waziristan. Launching the drone attacks meant your government ignored the Pakistan government's demand that there be no such attacks.

The next day, your administration follows that disclosure by taking a major step toward openness of the sort we haven't much seen in this age of terrorism. Your administration formally breaks with the policy of making drone strikes a widely known but officially unspoken secret. This time, White House counterterrorism adviser John O. Brennan announced the U.S. drone policy in a speech. Including the truth that U.S. officials can't always know the identities of all people who may be killed in drone attacks.

Meanwhile, in Afghanistan, you meet with President Hamid Karzai, greet enthusiastic U.S. troops, speak to Americans back home — and fly home. Of course, you never mention what you knew about the threat in Yemen.

But on May 6, a U.S. drone strike in Yemen kills Fahd al-Quso, who was believed to have succeeded American-born Anwar al-Awlaki (killed in Yemen by a U.S. drone last year) as AQAP's external planning chief. The next day, May 7, U.S. officials announce that the CIA and unspecified intelligence partners had disrupted the AQAP plot to blow up an airline.

U.S. officials haven't determined whether this device would have been detected by airport security. The device reportedly wasn't seized at an airport.

So here's where things stand now. With the Afghanistanization of the Afghan war at hand, your intelligence officials increasingly say al-Qaida in Yemen represents the greatest threat to America's homeland. But threats of al-Qaida-affiliated terrorists in Pakistan, Somalia and elsewhere remain menacing.

So, that intelligence pouring from your global terror funnel raises a question of wartime truth in labeling: Much has changed since 2009, when your administration stopped using the George W. Bush-era term "war on terror." Now it seems that's about to become the only war we are really waging.

Do you want to rethink — and maybe re-commission — the war on terror?

DEAR ABBY

Attention, chocolate lovers: Prepare to start swooning

Dear Abby: I have heard your dessert recipes are fabulous and I'd like to have them. I saw a column in which you mentioned your cookbooklets. I hope I'm correct about this, because I'd be interested in getting them. I have your booklet of poems and essays, which I have read and enjoyed many times.

Would you print your personal favorite dessert recipe and let me know how to get your cookbooklets? Warmest wishes to you, Abby, and thank you for all your columns. — Anita B. in New Jersey

■ Dear Anita: You are welcome. It's hard for me to choose just one recipe because I have a notorious sweet tooth, and my cookbooklets contain more than a few I have enjoyed many times. However, because you asked for my personal favorite, it would be one that not only I have enjoyed, but also one I have made for friends as gifts — Regency Brownies With Chocolate Frosting. Because the recipe yields 4 1/2 dozen, I confess I usually keep the “extra” six to munch on myself.

BROWNIES
1 cup butter (2 sticks)
4 ounces bittersweet chocolate
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
FROSTING
1 cup heavy cream
8 ounces bittersweet chocolate, finely chopped
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Line the bottom of an 18-by-12-by-2 (or 1)-inch baking pan with baking parchment paper and spray generously with butter-flavored cooking spray.

In the top of a double boiler, over medium heat, melt butter and 4 ounces chocolate. Reserve.

In a large bowl, beat sugar and eggs until fluffy. Add flour and salt, mixing well. Add chocolate mixture, blending thoroughly. Stir in nuts and vanilla.

Pour into prepared baking pan. Batter should be about 1/2 inch thick. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, or until top is crisp and toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool before pouring frosting over the top.

For the frosting: Bring cream to a boil, stirring constantly. Place chopped chocolate in a medium bowl; pour boiling cream over the chocolate and stir to blend well. Spread thin layer of warm frosting over top of brownies in pan. When cool, cut into 2-inch squares.

My cookbooklet set contains not only many easy-to-prepare crowd-pleasing recipes, but also tips on entertaining. It can be ordered by sending your name and address, plus check or money order for $14 to: Dear Abby — Cookbooklet Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. If you're a serious chocolate lover, these brownies will make your toes curl, and that's a promise.

'TWEEN 12 & 20

Your ex is a loser

Dr. Wallace: I am a 17-year-old girl who is in need of advice. I had been dating my boyfriend for four months when he broke up with me. He accused me of cheating on him and said some really mean things to me. The next day he apologized and said he wanted to get back with me. I told him it was too late, especially after all of the awful things he said to me.

He continued to text and call me constantly with more mean things to say. He even posted a picture on Facebook and called me a bad, bad name. He sent text messages to my mom and made up some horrible lies about me having sex with a bunch of guys and giving him a sexually transmitted disease. My mom, needless to say, was very, very upset.

Two weeks have gone by and he has apologized. He said he is on medication to help with his anger and mood swings and is seeing a therapist. The problem is I want to get back with him, but my parents are dead set against it. Even though he apologized to my mom, she is not willing to forgive him. She doesn't believe anything he says because of all the lies he told her. He hasn't told his parents he made up the lies about me cheating on him, so his parents hate me. My mom thinks I need therapy because I want to get back with him. She thinks I must lack self-esteem to be willing to go back with him. I really care about him but don't like the friction my seeing him causes at home. What can I do? — Nameless, Kewanee, Ill.

■ Nameless: Your ex-boyfriend is guilty of a cyber crime and should be prosecuted. Medication or no medication, this guy “stepped over the line” and should never be trusted again. Only your mother knows if you need therapy, but I agree with Mom it would be a huge mistake to date this loser again.

A COOL TREAT ALWAYS WILL BE APPRECIATED. Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and have my first boyfriend. Jimmy is going to have his 16th birthday in a month and I want to buy him a birthday gift that doesn't cost more than $25. Since I'm not really sure what guys like for gifts, I'm asking you for a few suggestions. — Serena, Des Moines, Iowa ■ Serena: For $25 or less, you could give a “mod” T-shirt or one with his favorite sports team logo, a gift certificate for a fast-food restaurant, CD store or bookstore. You also could give him a box of his favorite chocolates (he might share one when he opens it). If all else fails, invite him to his favorite ice cream parlor for a real cool treat and you pay.

DANCE TROUPE

Allegro students dance with Lula Washington

Recently, students from Allegro Dance Theatre auditioned for and were invited to dance with the Lula Washington Dance Theatre of California. Bart Lovins of the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center invited this professional modern dance troupe to perform at the center. Lula and her husband had come earlier in the summer to speak with dance school directors Carol Zagar of Allegro and Sherry Barnard of the Dance Centre of Elizabethtown.

The dancers all participated in a master class and an audition and then were asked to come to a rehearsal to learn a dance piece set by Lula's daughter. The dancers then performed on the concert, along with dancers from Lincoln Trail Elementary School.

Dancers performing from Allegro Dance Theatre were Madison Case, who also studies at The Dance Centre, Abi Elliott, Rian Johnson, Caitlin Kowalski, Tiombe Long, Katherine Meinshaussen, Mahalia Meinshaussen, Anna Cecille Pepper, who also studies at the Dance Centre, Anna Ronkainen, Millie Ronkainen, Kennedy Selbe and Larri Turner. Several students were asked to dance solos including Abi Elliott, Rian Johnson, Anna Cecille Pepper, Anna Ronkainen, Caitlin Kowalski, and Larri Turner.

Allegro Dance Theatre offers two levels of modern dance instruction. The lower level is taught by Raven Farrell and the upper level by Tamara Begley, faculty member for the Louisville Ballet.

GOP blocks Senate debate on student loan bill

By ALAN FRAM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans blocked a Democratic bill Tuesday to preserve low interest rates for millions of college students' loans, as the two parties engaged in election-year choreography aimed at showing each is the better protector of families in today's rugged economy.

The 52-45 vote to begin debating the legislation fell eight votes short of the 60 needed to proceed and stalled work on an effort both parties expect will ultimately produce a compromise, probably soon. For now, each side is happy to use the stalemate to snipe at the other with campaign-ready talking points while they are gridlocked over how to cover the $6 billion cost.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said the vote showed despite GOP claims they support preventing an increase in student loan rates, "Republicans showed today that it's only talk."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., speaks Tuesday with reporters following a vote on student loans on Capitol Hill in Washington.

He also noted the likely GOP presidential candidate, Mitt Romney, supports a temporary extension of today's low rates and needled, "I suggest he pick up the phone and call Senator McConnell."

That was a reference to Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who said the battle is a phony one manufactured by Democrats to woo votes from students. Both parties say they want to extend low interest rates.

"The Senate has ceased to be a place where problems are resolved. It's become instead a place where Democrats produce campaign material," McConnell said.

The vote nearly was party-line, with Reid voting "no" to give himself the procedural ability to demand another vote once a compromise is reached. Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-

Maine, who is retiring after citing excessive partisanship in Washington, voted "present."

The Democratic bill would keep interest rates for subsidized Stafford loans at 3.4 percent for an additional year, rather than doubling automatically for new loans starting July 1. It would have no impact on current loans.

A 2007 law approved by a Democratic Congress gradually lowered the rates but pops them back up to 6.8 percent in July because lawmakers were worried about costs.

Stafford loans are for low- and middle-income students. The Education Department projects the measure would affect 7.4 million undergraduates borrowing money in the year starting July 1.

Republicans oppose the Democratic plan to pay for the bill by forcing high-earning stockholders in some privately owned corporations and professional practices to pay additional Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes.

New Toyota expansion to create 86 jobs at Georgetown plant

By JERRY BOGGS
Georgetown News-Graphic

State and company officials gathered at the Toyota visitors center Tuesday to announce the latest expansion of the auto maker's flagship manufacturing plant.

Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear was on hand to announce Toyota Motor Manufacturing Kentucky will expand its operation to produce more 4-cylinder motors in the Georgetown plant.

The company is spending approximately $30 million to update a currently unused assembly line to produce more than 100,000 engines each year.

The expansion includes the addition of more than 30 jobs at the plant and is expected to be complete in July 2013.

"Twenty six years ago, I took part in Toyota's groundbreaking in Georgetown, which was filled with excitement for Kentucky's future," Gov. Beshear said. "Today, we still have that same excitement for Toyota's past, present and future in the Commonwealth. This latest expansion brings Toyota's total investment to nearly $6 billion, meaning billions of dollars in incomes for thousands of Kentuckians, changing lives, strengthening our economy and improving the Commonwealth."

The new engines will be equipped in the Camrys produced in Georgetown and also in the RAV4 which is assembled in Toyota's Ontario, Canada, plant.

Tuesday's announcement is the latest in a string of production increase announcements since February including Toyota plants in Indiana, West Virginia and Canada. The cumulative investment approximately is $565M and nearly 1,000 jobs are being added, a Toyota news release stated.

"This engine production increase, and the several announcements before it, reflect our growing optimism for an improving North American market," said Steve St. Angelo, Executive Vice President of Toyota Motor Engineering & Manufacturing North America, Inc.

Turmoil in Europe pushes U.S. stocks lower

By DANIEL WAGNER
AP Business Writer

Political uncertainty in debt-hobbled Europe spread to financial markets Tuesday and pushed stocks lower in Europe and the United States.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down almost 200 points at its low point for the day before recovering most of its loss to finish down 76. It was the average's fifth straight decline.

European indexes closed near their lowest levels in months, and the euro neared a five-month low against the dollar.

Prices plummeted for commodities like oil and copper that depend on the health of the world economy. The turmoil in Europe added to concerns about slower economic growth in China and weaker job creation in the U.S.

struggling to form a new government declared that the country was no longer bound by its promises cut spending sharply in exchange for international bailout loans.

The politician, Alexis Tsipras, also demanded a moratorium on repaying the part of Greece's debt that is "onerous." The main stock index in Greece closed down 3.6 percent after a 7 percent decline the day before.

Greek voters on Sunday rejected parties that had imposed the deep spending cuts demanded by Greece's bailout lenders. Cuts to pensions and social programs are deepening Greece's crushing recession.

After a calm finish Monday, benchmark indexes in Germany and France plunged to near their lowest levels this year. Italy's was near its lowest since last November. The main stock index in Britain hit its lowest point this year.

Central banks have injected billions into Europe's financial system, providing temporary support for stock and commodity prices, Alpert said. "If that liquidity is supposed to prime the pump, and the pump doesn't take over, then you've got a problem," he said.

In the U.S., traders dumped risky assets and commodities, partly because of concern that a punishing recession in Europe would hurt demand for U.S. exports. The price of oil continued its week-long slide. Copper and silver each lost more than 2 percent.

Gold fell to a four-month low, dipping below $1,600 per ounce for the first time since early January. Gold often serves as a safe, stable investment to hold in turbulent times.

Laura Cooper offers support

Woman who raised granddaughter helps others through group

By ROBERT VILLANUEVA
rvillanueva@thenewsenterprise.com

Mother's Day holds a special significance for Laura Cooper.

Cooper became an acting parent when she adopted her granddaughter, Amber, on April 8, 1997, in Michigan. Amber was 4, about four months shy of turning 5 on her July 31 birthday.

In October 1998, shortly after adopting Amber, Cooper moved to Hardin County and founded the nonprofit organization Open Arms. It's a support group for grandparents and acting parents raising children.

"We purposely retired early to give Amber a better life," Cooper said.

Her husband was only 50 when he retired from a job with a telephone company.

Cooper had adopted Amber's mother, Deanna, when Deanna was 5. Cooper also adopted another child, Tom, when he was 2.

After Deanna had Amber, she could not raise her because of her lifestyle, Cooper said.

"We had to protect the child, so we were able to adopt," she said.

Before coming to Kentucky, Cooper belonged to Grandparents As Parents, a support group in Michigan. With the help of Hardin County Schools Family Resource and Youth Services Center, she began Open Arms.

Amber now is 19 and attends the University of Indianapolis as a business major.

"I have a very strong relationship with my grandmother. I call her Mom though," Amber said. "There's hardly anything she doesn't know about me. She has been there for me my entire life and I wouldn't be the person I am today without her by my side."

Facing some of the challenges she's faced, Amber said, would have been unimaginable without her grandmother.

"Mother's Day is very special because it's just a reminder of how fortunate I was to be brought into such a loving home," Amber said.

Open Arms, Cooper said, filled a need for those grandparents or acting parents who might need to find resources or talk with others experiencing the same thing they are.

"A lot of children slip through the cracks," Cooper said.

Open Arms hosts three regular gatherings, one at Creekside Elementary School in Sonora, one at an Elizabethtown restaurant, usually Denny's, and one in Hodgenville.

Reda Sanders, an Elizabethtown Open Arms member, said the group Cooper started is valuable.

"Just as a support through all turmoil," she said.

For Janice Bradley, Cooper is a go-to person as a resource when she or any group member is asked about help.

"We direct them to her because she knows lawyers, judges and advocates," Bradley said.

"Our group networks with a lot of different groups," Cooper said, citing

The Open Arms support group lead by Laura Cooper, center, meets for discussion recently at Shoney's.

SpringHaven and the Advocacy and Support Center.

Cooper said community support for Open Arms has been good. But Open Arms must make ends meet on its own through fundraising efforts such as bake sales or sales of donated items at a booth in Peddler's Mall in Elizabethtown.

"Open Arms gets no funding whatsoever from any other agency," Cooper said.

In addition to her work forming Open Arms in the area, Cooper helped start the Hardinsburg Grandparent Support Group, has served on the Kentucky Statewide KinCare Steering Committee, is the recipient of the 2003 Bell Award for volunteer work in Hardin County Schools and the community and is a member of the National Committee of Grandparents for Children's Rights.

Cooper is not just active as a grandparent who raised a grandchild. She has been vice president of the E'town Dolphin swim team and board member of the Lincoln Trail Elementary Advisory Council, among other things.

Though Amber is an adult, Cooper continues to facilitate Open Arms meetings, assisting others who are raising grandchildren. And there are many.

National figures Cooper cited put the number of children being raised by grandparents, according to a 2000 census, at 3.6 million. Closer to home, an estimated 1,600 Hardin County residents were involved in raising their grandchildren in 2000, she said.

Unfortunately, many grandparents raising grandchildren are living at poverty level, don't know where to get assistance and often are too embarrassed to attend meetings, Cooper said. That, in part, is why Cooper believes Open Arms is so important.

"The grandparents do need the help," she said.

Mothers are worth honoring every day

SHONNA SHECKLES

GOT TO BE REAL

The second Sunday in May is approaching and as we all know, that is the day we honor our mothers or the mother figures in our lives.

In my mind, every day is Mother's Day.

What would I do without my mother? First and foremost, I would not be here. As long as I can remember, my mother always has been there, even during the crazy stages in mine and my sister's lives. She never once wavered.

A mother is a woman who stands for it all — the good, the bad and the ugly. To be a mother, the dictionary says you must be a female, and then be caring, nurturing, unselfish and giving. Does that mean you have to have birthed a child into the world to be a mother? No.

I am so glad God saw fit to give me the mother I have. He knew what he was doing there. I needed someone in my life who was not afraid to tell me no — she did, and at times, she still does. I needed someone to say, "Shonna, that will be enough. Don't make me have to tell you that again."

What about that look your mother can give you? That look that makes you scream inside, "Please, someone, help me, because when she gets close to me I am dead."

I think about all the places I could have been if I did not have the mother I have. The first place I would be in is trouble, and lots of it.

Is it not amazing how your mother knows what you are thinking before you can release it from your mouth? How she knows where you've been — and I'm convinced to this day she knew what I was doing — and she never left the house.

And behind all the work and worry of keeping their children in line is a mother's love and dedication.

A mother is a special type of person who takes their role of parent very seriously. Sometimes dads come and go, but for the most part, mothers always have stood the test of time, and children always can depend on them in most cases. Mothers often are the parents who wiped away tears, spanked behinds, cheered you on in your victories and helped you limp away in your defeats.

I talk to my mother every morning and I anticipate that call. If she is late, I find myself panicking. All I can say is, I hope there is a cellphone in heaven.

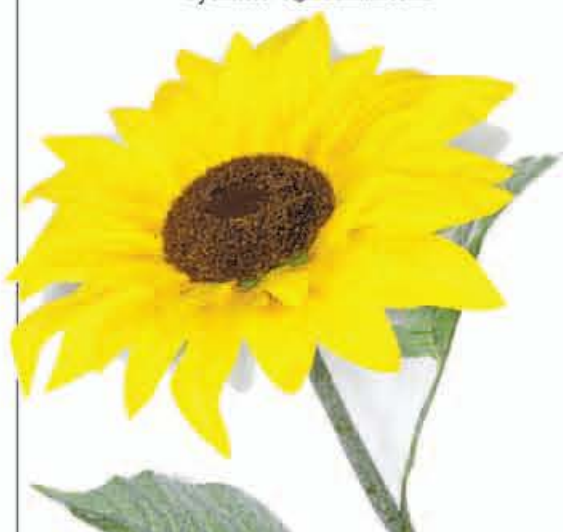

I can go to my mother about everything — within reason, of course. Not all the time is she on my side, but she is on the side of the right thing. She has no problem defending me when I'm right. And when I'm wrong, she tells me to get it right and move on.

I'm grateful that in 1914 President Woodrow Wilson declared the second Sunday in May as the official day for mothers. But I don't need an official holiday to honor my mother.

I don't think I ever will be able to repay my mother in this lifetime for all that she means to me and all the sacrifices she has made for my sister and me.

So my friends, if you have a mother, mom, mum, mama or mommy, let her know the second Sunday in May is nice but every day she is on this side of the sun is a wonderful day for her children.

Gas prices likely won't reach record high this summer

By CHRIS KAHN
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK — Gasoline prices likely won't set any records this summer, thanks to a recent drop in the price of oil.

The government on Tuesday slashed its forecast for average gas prices to $3.79 per gallon for the summer driving season. That's down from an initial estimate of $3.95 and below 2008's record average of $3.80.

The Energy Information Administration's revised forecast is encouraging news for the economy. Some economists blame high pump prices for so-so consumer spending this year. They also were seen as a factor in the loss of 35,000 retail jobs in February and March.

Gasoline prices soared 20 percent from January to early April.

A few analysts warned drivers they could pay as much as $5 this summer, eclipsing the 2008 record of $4.11 per gallon.

Not anymore. The price of benchmark crude has dropped about $8 per barrel since early April. Retail gas prices have followed, falling 17 cents since reaching $3.936 on April 5.

"It's almost like a tax cut," said Jared Bernstein, a senior fellow Center for Budget and Policy Priorities. EIA's prediction means motorists will spend about $10.7 billion less on gasoline than previously anticipated.

Steve Spencer, who owns Spencer Construction, buys gas for his work truck at Miller's Sunoco in Chambersburg, Pa. U.S. drivers will pay an average of 24 cents more per gallon for gasoline during this summer's travel season, the government said Tuesday.

Last year, drivers paid an average of $3.71 per gallon from April to September, a period the government considers the peak driving season.

Gasoline likely will become less of a campaign issue. Republican presidential candidates hammered at President Barack Obama as prices jumped this year, even though presidents have little sway over pump prices. If gasoline gets even cheaper, experts think it likely will get knocked from the top tier of campaign issues.

"To not have gas prices nipping at your heels in an election is obviously favorable to the incumbent," said Bernstein, who formerly was an economic adviser to Vice President Joe Biden.

It's still a bit of a mixed bag for the president. Part of the reason oil prices have declined during the past month is sluggishness in the U.S. economy, highlighted by a disappointing jobs report last week.

Europe helped sink oil prices as well. Some European countries are in recession and election results in France and Greece over the weekend threaten to derail the eurozone's plan for recovery.

Oil is down nearly 12 percent since peaking near $110 per barrel in February. As oil prices fall, it becomes cheaper for refineries to make gasoline and other fuels, and some of that savings eventually gets passed along in the form of cheaper pump prices.

Gasoline prices have tracked oil lower. The national average for gas now is $3.76 per gallon, according to auto club AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

U.S. SENDS AIRPORT SECURITY GUIDANCE TO OTHER COUNTRIES TO PROTECT AGAINST HIDDEN EXPLOSIVES.

In the wake of a terrorist bomb plot disrupted by the CIA, the U.S. advised some international airports and air carriers Tuesday about security measures for passengers traveling to the U.S.

The guidance from the Transportation Security Administration was a reminder of methods the U.S. provided to these international airports and carriers in the past six to eight months to help protect against threats from liquid explosives and explosives hidden inside a person's body or clothes or in printer cartridges. All are methods officials said al-Qaida's spinoff group in Yemen has considered for plots against the U.S., according to an American official who spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss the details of the guidance.

CALIFORNIA LAWMAKERS WEIGHING FIRST-IN-NATION BAN ON 'CONVERSION' THERAPY FOR GAY TEENS.

A first-of-its-kind ban on a controversial form of psychotherapy aimed at making gay people straight could face a key vote Tuesday by a group of California lawmakers.

Supporters say the legislation, which is before its final committee, is necessary because such treatments are ineffective and harmful.

"This therapy can be dangerous," said the bill's author Sen. Ted Lieu. He added the treatments can "cause extreme depression and guilt" that sometimes leads to suicide.

Conservative religious groups emphatically reject that view of sexual orientation therapy and say the California bill would interfere with parents' rights to seek appropriate psychological care for their children.

"While this is a direct assault on everyone's freedom it is also a not so subtle attack on religious liberty," the National Association for Research and Therapy of Homosexuality said in a statement.

launch a listening tour, traveling to schools and public universities to hear the needs and concerns of students and constituents.

Bryan also promotes government transparency and said open meetings and hearings should be held on important issues, such as the state budget and legislative redistricting.

Bryan plans to launch a website with a log of his voting record, attendance at committee meetings, a statement of financial expenditures and a list of office visitors.

He said the district deserves a legislator who is willing to lead and go to Frankfort to fix problems rather than score political points.

"You can't teach passion," Bryan said. "You have to hire passion."

Glenn Fonda, who has lost to Lee in three primaries, admitted he has been an obscure candidate during his past campaigns.

"That's probably all you know about me," Fonda said, referencing his previous losses.

Admittedly nervous, Fonda said his appearance

"It's probably hard to get votes without campaigning and raising funds."

Glenn Fonda
Democratic Candidate
For 25th District
State Representative

Monday was his first attempt at a public forum but said he believes he brings positive attributes to the race.

An information technology professional at Fort Knox and part-time computer science instructor, Fonda talked about his family, his familiarity with the Hardin County area, and his love of technology and teaching.

He also admitted his lack of interest in marketing himself as a candidate through fundraising and use of campaign signs.

"It's probably hard to get votes without campaigning and raising funds," he said.

Fonda said he has refused to raise a cent for his campaign but has challenged Lee because he feels like his vote is wasted when he goes to the polls and a candidate is running unopposed.

"I want to be that other guy (on the ballot)," he said.

Fonda also said he has a vision for the district and the state that would put more focus on education by restoring funding that has been cut in recent years.

"I think education has gotten a raw deal," he said.

Fonda expressed frustration with the state's inability to balance the budget, a misstep that would lead to disaster if individuals and families tried to do the same.

"I can't believe Frankfort can't keep its budget straightened out," he said.

Fonda also expressed a disdain for drunken driving laws he said are ineffective, saying he would lobby for stronger penalties, such as impoundment of cars on the first offense.

Lee closed out the night, voicing a satisfaction in seeing young people show interest in public office and roles of leadership.

"We have to have individuals who can (help) this county," he said.

Lee, who is vying for an 11th term, said he has gained respect from both sides of the aisle during his two decades in public office because he has shown a willingness to work with Democrats and Republicans to get important pieces of legislation passed. In this year's general session, Lee said he was successful in getting several pieces of sponsored legislation adopted, some of which helped clarify state law regulating unified governments.

If you go to Frankfort thinking you know it all and are unwilling to yield, Lee said, you will accomplish very little.

Lee challenged those in attendance to review his voting record over the past 20 years to see where he stands and what he stands for. Lee admitted there were a few votes he would like to have back, but it is the nature of the position.

"They don't put maybe on that machine," he said of his votes. "They put yes or no."

Lee also said he has strived to make the district better than he found it by remembering it is not his position. He simply has been entrusted with it by voters of the 25th district.

In that role, he said, he has strived to be a voice for those who have none, whether it is seniors, vulnerable adults, or those suffering from intellectual or mental disabilities.

"They can't afford to have paid lobbyists," Lee said.

Kentucky history.

"It puts the learning on them," she said.

The students portrayed dozens of Kentuckians, including pioneer Daniel Boone, President Abraham Lincoln, broadcaster Diane Sawyer, boxer Muhammad Ali and Backstreet Boy member Brian Littrell.

William Mangum portrayed actor Johnny Depp in the museum and dressed as the Mad Hatter, Depp's character in "Alice in Wonderland."

"I picked him because I've seen most of his movies," Mangum said. "I thought it'd be interesting to learn about."

Madison Hall and Grace Key portrayed country music singers and sisters Loretta Lynn and Crystal Gayle, whom they selected because they enjoy country music and they wanted a chance to be "pretend sisters."

Key was thrilled to have an opportunity to dress up. Hall said it was "a dream come true."

"I thought it would be fun because I've always wanted to dress up as a character and talk about myself," she said.

Thrush said she loved seeing the students enjoy the project.

The excitement they have about their learning is her favorite part, she said.

CONCERT: Tribute bands hail from Florida, New York

"We definitely wanted to do something a little different," Vaughn said. "We wanted to change it up a bit."

Vaughn said budget changes and timing constraints also played a role in the city's choice as many bands already have booked their summer tours.

"We looked at several rock bands and their availability," Vaughn said in a statement. "But we decided that taking a new spin on the concerts and inviting a tribute show to Elizabethtown would be a nice change for the community in addition to a new date. They still can get the same great sound at an affordable ticket price."

The city also has a full slate this summer as it takes over management of Cruisin' the Heartland in July and the Heartland Festival in August from the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce.

The concert's fate appeared in doubt a few weeks ago because of the city's commitment to other projects, but Vaughn announced plans in late April to soldier on with the concert at a later date.

The move is a departure from the city's previous concerts, which featured classic rock lineups such as Foreigner, REO Speedwagon, The Guess Who and Foghat.

Vaughn said the tribute acts hail from Florida and New York.

"We are very excited to have such great talent coming together in Elizabethtown," Mayor Tim Walker said in a statement. "The event will be the first in Elizabethtown to showcase a tribute to bands that so many people grew up listening to."

AC/DC, Aerosmith and Queen collectively have sold millions of albums and released a bevy of hits that continue to hold prominence in popular culture. Those songs include AC/DC's "Back in Black," Aerosmith's "Dream On" and Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody."

"We're pretty excited about the change and looking forward to the event," Vaughn said.

GOP files anti-violence against women bill

By LAURIE KELLMAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans on Tuesday advanced their own version of an election-year bill to protect women from violence.

The House Judiciary Committee voted 17-15 along party lines to renew the 1994 Violence Against Women Act that protects abused women and which expired last year. The Democratic-controlled Senate passed a conflicting version last month.

The law historically has enjoyed bipartisan support. But this year, with the presidency and congressional majorities at stake and female voters a pivotal constituency, it's become the latest vehicle for gender politicking over an issue on which there's been little debate in less-polarized years.

Republicans say they want to tighten provisions in the Senate bill that would protect abused immigrants — as well as taxpayer money doled out under the law.

Democrats say any effort to change the Senate version is just the latest shot in what they say is the GOP's "war against women."

"House Republicans are continuing their war on women by holding VAWA, Violence Against Women Act, hostage to their rigid right-wing ideology," Rep. Jerrold Nadler, D-N.Y., said.

"Some in Congress," retorted House Judiciary Committee Chairman Lamar Smith, R-Texas, "are trying to use violence against women as a political prop."

Congress passed the Violence Against Women Act in 1994 to provide legal assistance to abuse victims, enforce protection orders, pay for transitional housing aid and establish youth protection programs. Lawmakers of both parties reauthorized it in 2000 and 2005. The law expired last year.

In the Senate this year, Democrats proposed expanding it to specifically protect gays, lesbians and transsexuals in a move designed in part to prod Republicans into opposing the overall bill. Republicans bristled, saying the law already protects those groups. They objected to additional provisions protecting Native Americans and immigrants. Nonetheless, the Senate voted 68-31 to pass its five-year reauthorization.

House Republicans immediately started writing their own version. It came before the Judiciary Committee on Tuesday amid protests from women's groups that called it elitist and anti-victim, among other names. The measure would authorize $599.8 million in federal funding this fiscal year, compared with the Senate version's $659.3 million.

Sponsored by Rep. Sandy Adams, R-Fla., a long-ago domestic violence victim, the House bill proposes to crack down on fraud and mismanagement of taxpayer money dispersed under the law.

BURKE: Parents were last witnesses to testify

Wilburn Jr. was the first family member to discover Tracy Burke had been shot to death.

"How do you react to that?" he said. "From then on out, it's hell."

David Wilburn, Tracy Burke's father, said Burke was a "excellent daughter" and a "fantastic mom." He also knew Karen Comer, Tracy's mother-in-law from a previous marriage, and said she was "the sweetest woman in the world."

He recalled Tracy Burke's childhood and was at work when he found out about his daughter's death.

"It will never heal," he said.

The last person to take the stand for the prosecution was Tracy Burke's son. He said he thinks about his mother all the time.

"It just really feels like there's something missing," he said wiping tears from his eyes.

Defense attorneys called to the stand acquaintances, friends and work relations of Brent Burke who said they would help Burke if he was released from prison.

Sgt. Ted Morriss was Burke's squad leader in 2005. He said he would give Burke a place to stay and work on his farm if he was released on parole.

Corp. Craig Temple oversaw Burke while he was in jail and said he was a good inmate, never showed any "negative feelings," and was calm and forgiving. While in jail, Burke was injured and placed in an observation cell, Temple testified. The injury caused Burke to receive stitches in the back of his head.

Another witness, Capt. John Mayo, said he and Burke were "good friends" and he knows him as well as a family member. He would give Burke "anything he needed" to help assimilate himself back into society, he said. The defense asked if he would let Burke stay at his house. Mayo replied he would.

Echoing Mayo, family friend Judy Myers said she would do "whatever it took to help him out."

Burke's father and mother were the last witnesses to testify. Stan Burke said he was proud of his son for joining the military and that he was welcome in their home anytime.

Burke's mother testified her home community and church would support Burke if he was paroled. Burke often would help with the local church and once helped lay sandbags during a flood, she said. Burke kept busy in jail by writing reply letters to those in his hometown. She once brought back from the jail a 50-pound bag of letters Burke wrote, she said.

"He is our son, a blessing from God," she said sobbing. "I would welcome him with open arms back into our home."

The jury started deliberating Burke's sentence around 6:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Burke was accused of killing Tracy Burke and her former mother-in-law in Rineyville in 2007. After four mistrials in Hardin County, the charges against him were dropped. Soon after, a military court charged Burke for the same crime.

E'town girls clinch title

Panthers lead by one point going into final day of region tourney

By JOHN GROTH
jgroth@thenewsenterprise.com

Reza Haider looked like he was about to get skunked in his 5th Region Tournament boys' singles semifinal match.

Central Hardin junior Tad Skaggs, the No. 3 seed, was taking it to the second-seeded Elizabethtown senior in their first set.

Skaggs was buzzing serves, running down returns at lightning speed and keeping shots in play from any angle you can think.

Then, Haider flipped a switch and answered with his own flurry.

Somehow, Haider rallied for a 2-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory at University Drive Park in Elizabethtown to reach the singles final for the second consecutive year. After wallowing in frustration the first set, Haider quickened his footwork and forgot about what had happened at the start. Then, in the third set, he got a little crazy.

"I figured out how I play my best tennis - just not think and stay positive," said Haider, who will meet top-seeded Marion County freshman Alex Spalding in today's 5 p.m. final. "In the third set, I was just trying to get points one by one. I was up 4-2 and got too comfortable again and it went to 4-4 and I went into animal instinct mode. I was yelling and screaming - even when I wasn't winning points. I've never done that before. Tad played a great game."

It was another drama-filled and late night at the fifth region tournament - as the final girls' semifinal match wrapped up just after 11.

Elizabethtown clinched the girls' team title under the new format for the second straight year. The Lady Panthers have 16 points, well ahead of Central

Knox girls and boys place second at region meet

By JOSH CLAYWELL

BARDSTOWN - Kiara Austin put last season to rest with a stellar performance during Tuesday's Class 1-A, Region 3 Meet at Bardstown.

Hampered by nagging leg injuries, Austin had a less-than-spectacular junior year. But at Garnis Martin Field, the Fort Knox senior made sure the past remained behind her.

Austin won the 100-meter hurdles, long jump and triple jump and helped lead Fort Knox to victory in the 1,600 relay. She set personal records of 17 feet, 6 inches in the long jump, 36-07 in the triple and 15.11 seconds in the 100 hurdles.

"Personally, I did well," Austin said of her four-gold night. "I feel I could have done so much better. I'm so close to where I want to be. I'm not there yet, but I feel I can be by the time State rolls around."

The top two finishers in each event from every region, plus the next 10 fastest results across the state, advance to next week's state meet at the University of Louisville.

Bardstown beat Fort Knox for the girls' team title, 147-142.

"Our girls are young, but they want it," said first-year Fort Knox coach Dena Briscoe. "They're a strong group of kids, and I'm blessed to be able to work with them."

The Lady Eagles won three relays and were bolstered by freshman Regene Gill, who won the 300 hurdles and was second in the 100 hurdles. Eighth-grader Zantori Dickerson also qualified for State in the 400 dash, while junior Kierra Priest was second in the 100 dash.

While the Lady Eagles were satisfied with their night, their male teammates were left wondering "what if."

The Eagles were disqualified in two events - the 400 relay and the 100 dash. Fort Knox was ranked fourth in 1-A in the 400 relay, but was disqualified for being out of the zone on an exchange.

Central hammers North

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

North Hardin had no problem Tuesday night getting two outs on the 14th-ranked Central Hardin Lady Bruins. That third out proved to be quite elusive, however.

The visiting Lady Bruins scored all of their runs with one out left in an inning - including their nine-run top of the fourth - as they locked up the No. 1 seed for this month's 17th District Softball Tournament with a 13-0 rout of the Trojans.

"I told them that we have to make plays and you can't give good teams like Central Hardin extra outs," said veteran coach Donnie Baker, whose young Trojans committed three actual errors and several more mental ones. "When we got two outs, we just couldn't make a play."

But the Lady Bruins (20-8 overall, 7-0 in district) continued to make plays, either with their bats or by sophomore Jessica Nall's hands.

A night after she was the only Lady Bruin starter not to get on base in a rout of LaRue County, senior third baseman Abbi Goedde went 4-for-4 - including two hits in the fourth - with two runs scored and one RBI.

The Lindsey Wilson College signee did her damage without seeing more than 10 total pitches.

"I rather get ahead early instead of going deep into the count," Goedde said.

Wilson, Meade shut out Trojans

By CHUCK JONES
cjones@thenewsenterprise.com

Meade County's Bo Wilson thought his fastball lacked its usual pop, but that's about all he could find wrong with his pitching performance Tuesday evening.

The senior right-hander tossed a one-hit shutout to lead the Green Wave to a 5-0 victory over the North Hardin Trojans at James R. Aldridge Field.

"My fastball wasn't popping like it usually does, but I was trying to keep them off-balance," Wilson said. "I had to mix it up. They hit the ball hard, but right at people."

Wilson was in complete control. After giving up a one-out double to Andrew Boyles in the first, Wilson retired 11 consecutive Trojans. The streak would have been longer as Wilson struck out Graham Mathews to start the fifth inning, but he reached on a passed ball.

The fifth inning was the only hint of trouble for Wilson, who struck out eight. After Mathews reached, junior Jamaal Wilson grounded into a fielder's choice, forcing out Mathews. Wilson advanced to second on an errant pick-off attempt and then junior Jordan Sanchez was hit by a pitch. But Wilson picked off Wilson and induced freshman Markus Bell to ground out.

"Andrew hammered that ball in the gap," Wilson said. "I got into a groove after that, and the next time he came up, I made sure not to make the same mistake."

Meade County coach Todd Clanton didn't realize how dominant Wilson had been until the seventh inning when Mathews reached on an error.

"I didn't know he had only given up one hit until the last inning," Clanton said. "We talked about taking him out before the seventh and Bo lobbied to go back in. He got his way this time."

Wilson threw only 89 pitches - 59 for strikes. He threw 21 pitches in the fifth inning, but he had four innings where he needed only 11 or fewer pitches to retire the side.

Woods hopes to stick around at Sawgrass

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Tiger Woods is about the only person not in a panic about his game.

These remain curious times for the guy trying to show he can still dominate golf as he once did. In his last four tournaments, Woods walked off the course in the middle of the final round at Doral with tightness in his left Achilles tendon, won by five shots at Bay Hill for his first PGA Tour title in 30 months, was an also-ran at the Masters with his worst performance as a pro and missed the cut at Quail Hollow for only the eighth time in his career.

In the absence of trophies, there is no shortage of opinions.

Peter Alliss, the player-turned-broadcaster, said before his induction into the World Golf Hall of Fame that Woods is “gone at the moment.” Nick Faldo, a six-time major champion who works for CBS Sports and Golf Channel, said Woods no longer has the self-belief that made him No. 1 for all those years. Brandel Chamblee, a journeyman on the PGA Tour and now an analyst for Golf Channel, said Woods should fire Sean Foley and call his old coach, Butch Harmon.

“And I know he’ll never do that because he’s letting his ego get in the way of common sense,” Chamblee said on a conference call for The Players Championship, which starts Thursday. “He wants to prove to people he’s right. He would rather prove to people he’s right than be right.”

Woods has been down this road, though not with so many detours.

“Guys, I’ve done this before,” Woods said. “I’ve been through this. Actually, a lot of you guys lived it with me, went through those periods where I wasn’t quite where I wanted to be. I had some pretty good runs after that, and this is no different. It takes a little bit of a time, and I keep building and things eventually come around to where they feel natural and efficient.

“I think that’s probably the most important word, is that you get out there and you feel efficient in what you’re doing.”

Woods shot back with subtlety at the TV analysts.

“I can understand that everyone has an opinion, and he’s entitled to his. But he’s no longer playing anymore, so, so be it,” Woods said of Chamblee, who won once in 380 starts in his PGA Tour career.

As for Faldo’s comments on his self-belief?

“I always find it interesting since they’re not in my head,” Woods said. “They must have some kind of superpower I don’t know about.”

‘Hitman’ Harvick, ‘Rowdy’ Busch set for Round 2

By PETE IACOBELLI
AP Sports Writer

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Darlington Raceway is bracing for Round 2 between Kevin “The Hitman” Harvick and Kyle “Rowdy” Busch.

Track president Chris Browning said he knew from the moment Harvick and Busch tangled after last year’s Southern 500 his people would have the perfect way to sell this weekend’s Sprint Cup race.

Harvick left his car, punched at Busch through the window of his No. 18 Toyota before Busch pushed Harvick’s machine out of the way to leave.

Fans cheered and Browning had his ad campaign.

“I told our guys,” Browning recalled, “Look, our creative (thinking) is done. This is what we need to do.”

The combatants aren’t thrilled about the idea.

“I think it’s dumb. It’s pretty stupid,” Busch said at Richmond a couple of weeks ago.

Harvick was less blunt, yet still believes it’s easier to race when you’re not in the midst of controversy.

“It’s just easier to not to have to answer the questions from your sponsors, or your team,” he said.

The track has placed billboards throughout the region, purchased radio spots and Internet ads promoting a potential second showdown at the Southern 500 on Saturday night.

They had plenty to work with following the controversy after last year’s race.

Busch, Harvick and Clint Bowyer were three-wide on the narrow race-track during a late restart when all were trying to chase down winner Regan Smith. Bowyer went sprawling into the interior wall after contact. As cars spun out behind, Busch gathered his machine, then veered down the track and sent Harvick spinning.

Smith held on through a green-white-checked finish for his first Sprint Cup victory. But the real drama was unfolding on pit road as Busch and Harvick drove from the track. Busch was up against Harvick’s back bumper when Harvick jumped out and rushed toward Busch’s window where it looked like he took a swing at Busch.

Busch bumped Harvick’s driverless car into the interior wall and headed into the garage.

Both were called into the NASCAR hauler and each left composed — although with different versions of what happened.

Busch said Harvick engaged in “unacceptable racing.”

“I gave him room off of two, I didn’t get the room,” Busch said.

Harvick said he was running hard and “things happen. That’s it. What do you do?”

Busch and Harvick were both fined $25,000 and placed on probation by NASCAR after the Darlington tussle. It wasn’t the last time the two bumped and battled on NASCAR’s top circuit. A few weeks later at Pocono, the two were fighting for position and Harvick forced his rival down the track. NASCAR radioed both crews to tell their drivers to cool it.

That’s not likely to happen. NASCAR Hall-of-Famer and announcer Darrell Waltrip said the two may be the closest thing the circuit has to a continuing, old-style feud.

“I don’t think they like each other too much,” Waltrip said.

That’s what Darlington’s counting on to fill the stands.

The ads say, “Don’t Miss Round 2” and feature a glaring Harvick with arms folded staring at an image of Busch whose arms are raised in triumph and whose hands appear to have boxing gloves on.

Browning, Darlington’s president, reached out to both drivers to do more Harvick-vs.-Busch promotion for the Mother’s Day weekend race.

“Both of them politely declined,” Browning said. “And I can understand. Each of them have to watch out for their own brands.”

Top-ranked Djokovic and Azarenka advance at Madrid Open

By PAUL LOGOTHETIS
AP Sports Writer

MADRID — Novak Djokovic needed three sets to win his first match on the blue clay at the Madrid Open on Tuesday, and then stepped up his criticism of the new surface.

Djokovic labored to a 6-2, 2-6, 6-3 victory over Daniel Gimeno-Traver of Spain in his debut on the Magic Box’s unorthodox surface, after top-ranked Victoria Azarenka and Maria Sharapova both beat Czech opponents to advance in the women’s event.

Djokovic, who had already voiced his opposition to the blue clay, was left fuming over the condition of center court, which he said was completely different to the practice courts he trained on before the event.

“To me that’s not tennis. Either I come out with football shoes or I invite Chuck Norris to advise me how to play on this court,” said Djokovic, who like Rafael Nadal has been critical of the new-look surface. “Center court is impossible to move on. I hit five balls throughout the whole match. With everything else, I was just trying to keep the ball in the court.”

The ATP reiterated that the new surface is in a test period this year, and that a decision on whether to use it again will be made after this event.

The defending champion was cruising until the second set when his 137th-ranked Spanish opponent broke for 2-1. Djokovic then made four straight unforced errors in his next service game — including two double faults — to go down 4-1.

Djokovic complained about the surface throughout, but managed to get his emotions in check and his game together to take a decisive 4-2 lead in the third set before sealing his 25th match win of the season.

“When you slide on the red clay you have a feeling you can stop and recover from that step. But here, whatever you do ... you are always slipping,” said Djokovic, who hit 20 winners to 24 unforced errors. “Not a single player — not woman nor man — I didn’t hear anyone say ‘I like blue clay.’”

The women’s top two overcame dips in concentration to put away mistake-prone opponents. Azarenka held off Andrea Hlavackova’s challenge to win 6-3, 7-6 (2) after Sharapova beat Klara Zakopalova 6-4, 6-3.

Caroline Wozniacki and Serena Williams will meet in the last 16 after both won their second-round matches. Wozniacki beat Mona Barthel of Germany 6-4, 7-6 (2), while Williams was a 6-2, 6-1 winner over Anastasia Pavlyuchenkova of Russia.

Azarenka has already won four titles this year, including the Australian Open, but showed less convincing form on the blue surface.

“I felt like a lost a little bit of my concentration,” Azarenka said. “I didn’t adjust well to some of the obstacles that happened but I’m glad that I could turn it around pretty quickly and finish the match in my favor.”

Azarenka plays Ana Ivanovic in the third round after the Serbian beat Nadia Petrova 7-5, 6-1 in an earlier match Tuesday.

In men’s play, Jurgen Melzer rallied to beat Feliciano Lopez 3-6, 7-6 (6), 6-4, the first seeded player to exit.

Brodeur, Devils eliminate Philadelphia with 3-1 win

By DAN GELSTON
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Bryce Salvador, David Clarkson and Ilya Kovalchuk scored goals to lift New Jersey to a 3-1 Game 5 win over the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday night, sending the Devils into the Eastern Conference finals for the first time since 2003.

Martin Brodeur was strong in goal and has the Devils back in position to win their fourth Stanley Cup. The Devils await the winner of the New York Rangers-Washington Capitals series. The Devils rebounded this season under coach Peter DeBoer after missing the playoffs for the first time since 1996 last season.

The sixth-seeded Devils scored twice in the first period and became the first East team to win four straight games in these playoffs.

“It was just sticking with the game plan and doing what it takes to be successful,” DeBoer said. “Marty made some saves when he needed to, and we held on.”

Max Talbot scored for the Flyers, but Philadelphia was eliminated in the conference semifinals for the second straight season. The Flyers finished the season without suspended All-Star forward Claude Giroux because of his illegal check to the head on New Jersey center Dainius Zubrus in Game 4.

The Flyers underwent a facelift last summer that saw them trade team captain Mike Richards to the Los Angeles Kings and acquire goalie Ilya Bryzgalov from the Phoenix Coyotes.

The Kings and Coyotes will play in the West finals while the Flyers watch from home.

Penske Racing clicking in NASCAR and IndyCar

By JENNA FRYER
AP Auto Racing Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — It was just a year ago that Penske Racing, or at least its NASCAR branch, appeared to be in total turmoil.

Kurt Busch used a meltdown over his team radio at Richmond to assail all the shortcomings he saw at Penske. It certainly got the attention of team management, and behind-the-scene changes began almost immediately.

The performance began to improve, too, especially for Brad Keselowski. Spurred in part by Busch’s claim that it had been years since he’d had a competitive teammate, Keselowski went on to win three races and earn a spot in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

Now, a year removed from that low point for the proud Penske organization, things couldn’t be better. Keselowski’s win Sunday at Talladega Superspeedway — the first for team owner Roger Penske — was his second of the season and cemented him as a strong contender to give Penske his first Cup championship.

And, oh, by the way, Penske’s IndyCar team is pretty good, too. His drivers have combined to win all four races and all four poles so far this season, and begin Saturday preparing for the Indianapolis 500 — a race the organization has won 15 times.

“I’m not king of the world, I’ll tell you that for sure,” Penske said. “I think we made some changes last year after Richmond. We had a plan. I think everybody stuck together. Kurt was a big help there, obviously as we got going with getting in the Chase. I think you’ve seen this year this year we’ve been very competitive.

“On the IndyCar side, when you win the first four races, can’t do much better than that. Overall, I think we’ve got a great season going. It’s a credit really to our people.”

It was Keselowski who gave Penske his only NASCAR title, in 2010 in the second-tier Nationwide Series. Otherwise, the most decorated team owner in motorsports has been shutout. Penske first joined in NASCAR in 1972, but was out of the series from 1981 through 1990.

The opportunity to take Penske to the head table at the season-ending awards ceremony is why Keselowski chose the organization over everybody else in NASCAR when he got out of his developmental deal with Hendrick Motorsports after the 2009 season.

“I want to be that first guy. I feel like (Penske’s) dedicated to making that happen,” Keselowski said. “I look as some of the other elite car owners in the sport, and I don’t want this to be offensive, but to win another Cup championship for Hendrick or Richard Childress is not the same as winning the first for Roger Penske. That’s a whole different accomplishment.

“I think he’s certainly paid his dues in this sport, has that reputation as ... a titan for a reason, and that is that he can get it done. I want to be the guy that proves it in the record books.”

Keselowski is ranked 12th in the Sprint Cup standings, but those two wins should pretty much guarantee him at least one of the two wild card slots in the 12-driver Chase. That’s how he got in last year, when three regular-season victories locked him into the championship field, and Keselowski finished fifth in the final standings.

This year, he’s shown versatility with wins at Talladega and Bristol.

At Talladega, he used a calculated last-lap move to stave off Kyle Busch and become the first driver in five races at the 2.66-mile superspeedway to take the white flag and hold on for the victory. His win on the 0.533-mile Bristol bullring was more dominant: he led 232 of the 500 laps and held off Matt Kenseth on a late restart.

“I wouldn’t trade him for anybody right now,” Penske said.

On the IndyCar side, Will Power has won the last three races and goes into Indy as the points leader. Helio Castroneves won the season opener, and Ryan Briscoe has been fast — he won the pole at Long Beach — but like Allmendinger doesn’t have the results yet.

Cindric believes the first step toward raising both programs to the same level was merging the IndyCar operation into the same building as the NASCAR part, which was done in 2007. He figured it would take three to four years to get the NASCAR piece turned around, “and it’s taken a little bit longer.

“You take the good from both types. We didn’t make the NASCAR team similar to the IndyCar team, or vice versa,” he said. “I think over time we’ve been able to take the best of both worlds, take the good out of both, and you couldn’t do that unless they were in the same building. We are now starting to see more and more of the payback.”

Morgan lifts E'town over Green; LaRue pounds Hart

The News-Enterprise

Junior Garrett Morgan drove in sophomore Preston Patterson with a single in the bottom of the eighth inning Tuesday as the Elizabethtown Panthers ended their four-game losing streak by rallying by 5th Region rival Green County, 5-4.

The Dragons (15-13) entered the bottom of the seventh with a 4-2 lead.

Junior Cannon Pender doubled, while sophomore Jon Tarrence added two RBIs for the Panthers (11-17).

Eighth-grader Hunter Sullivan worked a scoreless eighth for his third win of the year.

MEADE: cruises past North Hardin, 5-0

“He’s one of the best in the area,” North Hardin coach Ace Adcock said. “He has three really, really good pitches and he can throw them at any time in the count. He didn’t have any walks and he forces you to put the ball in play. We tip our hat to him because he threw a great game.”

While Wilson showcased pinpoint accuracy, freshman Javier Echevarria, who took the loss, struggled with his control. He allowed seven walks and hit two batters in four innings. Of the 10 Green Wave runners who reached on either a walk or getting hit, four scored.

“Walks and hit batters will kill you on any level,” Adcock said. “Free bases turn into runs. We can’t have that. We’re still searching for what works best for us for the postseason.”

Meade County (18-5) only had five hits, but managed to make the most of them.

In the top of the first, junior

North Hardin's Graham Mathews is out at second but disrupts a double-play attempt by Meade County's Andrew Zabel during Tuesday's game at North Hardin High School.

Kaleb Lancaster was hit by a pitch and moved to second on senior Brady Smith's single. After senior Garrett Ledford grounded into a fielder's choice, a balk scored Lancaster. Junior Jake Wilson walked, junior Zach Kullman was hit by a pitch and eighth-grader Kase Mattingly's walk forced in Ledford.

Bo Wilson walked with one out in the second and Lancaster smacked an RBI double to right-center field to stretch the lead to 3-0.

The Green Wave added a run in the fourth on Jake Wilson's run-scoring single and another in the fifth on a double steal – Mattingly stole home as Bo Wilson took second.

“You have to find ways to score,” Bo Wilson said. “You have to get on, get around and score. We did a good job of executing with runners on. Five runs will win a lot of games now with the new bats.”

The Trojans (16-12) also lost Boyles to a thumb injury. Boyles left in the fifth inning and Adcock said he probably won't know the extent of the injury until today.

CENTRAL: locks up top seed in district

Eighth-grade catcher Mariah Bryant went 2-for-4 with a two-run triple to deep right in the first inning and a three-run double to deep center in the fourth.

“I was just looking for a good pitch to hit right down the middle,” said Bryant, who flew out to deep center in the third.

Junior right fielder Brianna Blair went 2-for-4 with two RBIs and scored once. Freshman shortstop Kelsey McGuffin, who has reached base eight times in her last nine plate appearances, scored a team-high three runs.

Eleven Lady Bruins reached base or scored as Central Hardin had 11 hits and drew eight walks.

“I’m about infinity percent sure that my offense has my back all the time,” Nall said.

Nall (9-4) had her defense's back, not that she really needed the other fielders – at least not after the first.

She induced a flyout to open the bottom of the first, but worked her way into trouble as

Central Hardin coach Jamie Goodman trotted out to the circle and told Nall to get the ball up a little bit and she had the correct response, ending the threat with back-to-back swinging strikeouts on high outside fastballs.

“That breaks your back,” Baker said. “You score there and then the pressure’s on them.”

Instead, Nall put the pressure on North Hardin's bats.

Those strikeouts started a streak of four straight. She had eight straight later on, fanning the side in the third and fourth innings and the first two batters in the fifth. She ended the game with the final of her season-high 13 strikeouts.

“She just gets in a zone,” Goedde said of Nall, who shut out top-ranked Allen County-Scottsville last week and blanked No. 4 Louisville Mercy in regulation less than two weeks ago. “Coach said that she gets herself into trouble, but she always works herself out of it, too. She has stepped it up so much this year.”

Central Hardin completes its district schedule at 5:15 today when it travels to John Hardin to try to finish the teams' second meeting this season for the third time. Central Hardin led 8-1 and was batting in the top of the third when storms halted the game the last time the teams tried playing. A win or loss won't matter to the Lady Bruins' district tournament seed, while John Hardin could still earn the No. 3 seed if it wins tonight and beats Elizabethtown on Monday.

“We still had to work to get the No. 1 seed,” Goedde said. “It’s nice knowing that we’re the No. 1 seed going into it, but anything can still happen.”

Pacers roll past Magic to advance to second round; Hawks edge Celtics

The Associated Press

Danny Granger scored 25 points to help the Indiana Pacers defeat the Orlando Magic, 105-87 on Tuesday night and clinch their first-round Eastern Conference playoff series.

It was Indiana's first series win since 2005 and its first clincher on its home court since the first round of the 2000 playoffs. The Pacers will play Miami or New York in the second round.

Darren Collison scored 15 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and George Hill added 15 points for the Pacers, who trailed by two at the end of the third quarter but outscored the Magic, 36-16 in the final 12 minutes.

Jameer Nelson led Orlando with 27 points and made 5-of-8 3-pointers. Glen Davis, a thorn in Indiana's side throughout the series, scored 15 but made just 6-of-17 shots. The Magic made just 5-of-16 shots in the fourth quarter.

Collison made a layup and hit a 3-pointer to give the Pacers a 78-73 lead with 9:33 to play. After Nelson drained another 3, Collison came back with a layup, then Leandro Barbosa's steal and layup pushed Indiana's lead to 87-80 with 6:49 to play and forced an Orlando timeout.

HAWKS 87, CELTICS 86. Al

Horford scored 19 points in his first start since January, and the Atlanta Hawks held on for a one-point victory over the Boston Celtics in a thrilling Game 5 of the Eastern Conference playoffs.

The Celtics led the first-round series, 3-2 heading back to Boston for Game 6 on Thursday. If the Hawks can steal one on the road, the deciding game would be Saturday in Atlanta.

Boston had a chance to clinch the series when Rajon Rondo stole Josh Smith's inbound pass with 10 seconds remaining and raced down the court, looking for the winner. But he got hemmed in along the sideline and Smith knocked away a desperation pass, the ball rolling away as time ran out.

Fort Knox senior Akio Tonge clears a hurdle during the 300-meter hurdles Tuesday at Bardstown High School in the Class 1-A, Region 3 meet. Tonge won the event as well as the 110 hurdles.

KNOX: finishes second at region

The penalties put a damper on the night for Fort Knox senior Akio Tonge, who swept the hurdles and also ran in the 400 and 1,600 relays. “We easily had a 10- to 15-meter lead,” Tonge said. “To work hard and find out we got disqualified for a simple mistake, it’s very frustrating. But that’s track. Stuff happens. It hurts. We put in a lot of blood, sweat and tears working on our handoffs. It’s very disappointing to be disqualified the meet before State.” The Eagles were also without senior Dominic Dingle, who sat out with a hamstring injury. He was seeded second in the 100 and 200 dashes. Fort Knox still finished second behind Bardstown with 114 points, but Tonge and the Eagles know they were capable of doing much more. “We just can’t get big-headed,” Tonge said. “That’s exactly what happened. Coach pumped us up, but people took it to their head. I think everything just got to us. I’m mad, but when it’s their senior year they’re going to want everybody to be in it 110 percent.” Senior Oscar Cruz won the 400 dash and was second in the long jump, while junior Brandon Franklin was runner-up to Tonge in the 110 hurdles. Fort Knox also qualified in every relay but the 400.

“Even with the disappointment, we had some good things happen,” Briscoe said. “We had some adversity and came through it. Our 4-by-2 and 4-by-4 had alternates and we were still able to win both. Lots of other things happened, but our kids are mentally strong to hold on and continue to go. “I’m not disappointed,” she added. “Those kids ran their butts off.” Josh Claywell can be reached at (270) 505-1752

REGION: E’town girls wrap up championship

Hardin (seven). All four of Elizabethtown’s entries – senior AnnLauren Fiepke (girls’ singles’ No. 1 seed), sophomore Natalie Fiepke (girls’ singles’ No. 2 seed, junior Mary-Chapin Snow and freshman Mackenzie Snow (girls’ doubles’ No. 1 seed) and juniors Sydney Davis and Lauren Riney (girls’ doubles’ No. 4 seed) reached the finals. All will be aiming for their first region title and one of the Fiepkas will have the chance to become a region champ just like their mom, Kristin – a three-time region winner from 1979-81. The boys’ championship is still up for grabs. Elizabethtown leads that race with 12 points, with Marion County one point behind. Eleven area singles players or doubles teams qualified for the KHSAA State Tournament, which will be held May 18-19 in Lexington. There was plenty of drama, too. There was LaRue County senior Michelle Seymour, who after having a baby nine months ago, showed what grit and determination can do. She earned her third state trip with some spirited play. Seymour pushed through for a 6-0, 5-7, 6-2 victory over seventh-seeded Aryn Massengale from Taylor County in the quarterfinals before giving AnnLauren Fiepke a fight in a 6-3, 6-2 semifinal loss. “I let down and she (Aryn)

You either win or go home. I did not want to lose it.” Emotions ran high for Central Hardin junior cousins Hares Patel and Vasu Patel, too. The fourth-seeded duo reached State after defeating fifth-seeded seniors Blake McQuown and Brody Parker from John Hardin, 6-4, 6-4 in the quarterfinals before falling 6-3, 6-1 in the semifinals to Elizabethtown seniors Bilal Ahmed and Zeeshan Bhatti. But qualifying for State meant the world to them. Vasu couldn’t play with Hares in last year’s region tournament, missing it after burning himself while cooking noodles just days before. “It means no more cooking for me,” he joked. “It feels amazing right now.” Hares carried the load a little more, especially against John Hardin when Vasu was struggling with his return game. This was special for him. “Every little emotion you could ever have is packed into right now,” Hares said. Then, there were the surprises. That includes the sophomore doubles team of Daniel Orr and Ethan Wright from Meade County. Time to talk tuna recipes

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Dear Heloise: Many years ago, when my children were young, your mother printed a recipe using tuna. I remember dropping the tuna in oil. I can't find the recipe, and I think my grandchildren would like it. Thank you. — A Faithful Reader, via email

■ Dear Reader: Thank you for writing. My mother, the original Heloise (1919-1977), made these tasty treats using canned salmon. She did suggest that if you're on a tight budget, you can substitute tuna. Here's the recipe for Heloise's Salmonettes.

1 can of salmon or tuna (14 ounces)
1/4 cup reserved liquid from the salmon or tuna
1 egg, lightly beaten
1/2 cup flour

Pepper (optional, to taste)
1 heaping teaspoon baking powder

Fill a deep fryer or skillet half-full of oil and preheat while assembling the salmonettes.

Drain all but 1/4 cup of the liquid off the canned fish and set aside. Place fish in a mixing bowl and break apart with a fork. A little at a time, add egg, flour and pepper. Mix well but do not overmix.

Add the baking powder to the reserved liquid and beat with a whisk or fork until frothy. immediately add it to the fish mixture and stir to blend — do not let it sit after mixing.

Drop the mixture off iced-tea spoons into the hot oil. Keep an eye on them, because it won't take long until they are browned. Drain on a paper towel and then serve. Unfortunately, this is a recipe that you cannot make ahead of time and then cook. You have to fry them as soon as you mix them. Enjoy.

CELERY LEAVES.

Readers: I love celery stuffed with peanut butter or cream cheese as a snack. It also is an ingredient in numerous recipes. However, most folks cut off the leaves and throw them away. Stop. Don't.

The leaves contain the most vitamin C, calcium and potassium of the entire plant. The leaves can be used like parsley when seasoning dishes. They also can be mixed with other greens to make salad. So, don't toss those leaves. Use within a day or two, because they won't keep for long.

CRUNCHY ROLLS.

Heloise: Sometimes I am in the mood for an eggroll out of the freezer. I am usually not patient enough to wait for them to cook. In the microwave, they aren't crunchy like they are right out of the oven. I put the heated eggroll in a hard taco shell. I get the crunch I want in two minutes instead of 30. — Kevin C., via email

PEOPLE

■ A man who had a cardiac arrest while jogging in London's Hyde Park says his life was saved with help from a famous passer-by — Dustin Hoffman.

Sam Dempster said Tuesday the actor waited with him in the park after he collapsed April 27 until paramedics arrived.

On his recovery blog, Dempster, 27, thanked medical staff and "my newfound favorite celebrity Dustin Hoffman."

Dempster initially credited Hoffman with having summoned an ambulance, but the London Ambulance

HOFFMAN

Service said someone else had made the emergency call.

Martin Macarthur, one of the paramedics on the scene, said Hoffman described seeing Dempster collapse and froth at the mouth.

"It is essential to get a history of what has happened, and he witnessed the jogger go down. He was the main witness and saw him stagger and go down," Macarthur said. "He stayed on the scene for the whole duration of the resuscitation which was about 15 minutes. He was very concerned."

Macarthur said the 74-year-old actor told medics, "Great job, guys" after they resuscitated Dempster with a defibrillator.

IN THE STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: You can succeed, as long as you don't let impulse be your guide. Stick to the practical applications that have always kept you on the right track. There is plenty to gain through hard work and dedication. Welcome challenges, knowing you are prepared to go the distance to get what you want. Your numbers are 4, 11, 19, 22, 27, 33, 46.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't take action unless you are certain that you are responding appropriately. An impulsive move at this point may damage what you have been working toward. Take a deep breath and recalculate your next move. When in doubt, stop and observe. ☼

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look for opportunities to learn. Take part in functions that can help you further your position. Getting together with people who share your interests will help you direct your energy efficiently. Do something nice for someone you love. ☼☼☼

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get down to business. Take care of personal affairs. Don't leave anything to chance. Luck is with you if you do your due diligence and focus on getting ahead. Financial gains are likely if you are disciplined and negotiate strategically. ☼☼☼

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spread a little cheer and engage in friendly banter. Discuss your plans openly and be playful with your friends, family and lover. Your attitude will make the difference in the outcome of whatever you pursue. A partnership will bring you good fortune. ☼☼

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A disciplined approach to both professional and personal money matters will put you in a good position. Extravagance of any kind must be avoided. Don't allow your emotions to lead to an impulsive promise that will be difficult to fulfill. ☼☼☼

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Show how energetic you can be. Take the initiative and add your personal touch to whatever you do. Your ability to convince others to help you will put you well ahead of schedule. Communicating and networking will enhance your reputation. ☼☼☼☼☼

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You'll have excellent vision when it comes to stretching your money so you can purchase everything you need for the right price. Greater security will result if you discuss your plans for the future with someone you love. ☼☼

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): As long as you weigh the pros and cons before you proceed, you will not have to backtrack. Impulse will be your downfall. Focus on how you can tactfully make the alterations you want without raising suspicion. Use creative logic. ☼☼☼

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Complete whatever is asked of you as quickly as possible. You will want to leave enough time to do something enjoyable late in the day with a friend or lover. A change at home should turn out in your favor. ☼☼☼

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Let your emotions show and you will be able to get others to do as you please. Making changes to your home will bring about an opportunity to meet someone who will benefit you in the future. An investment will pay off. ☼☼☼

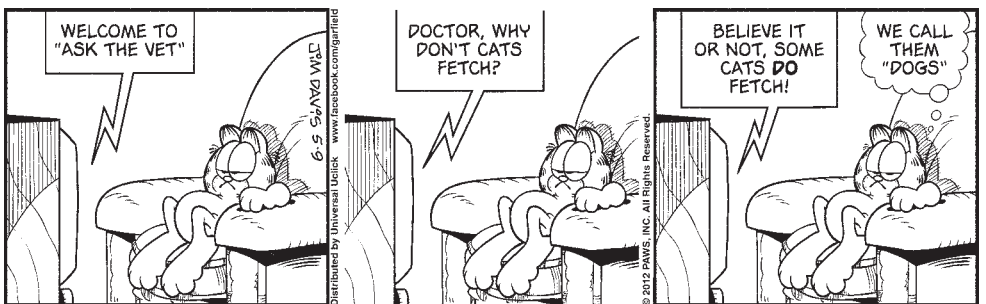

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Slow down, rethink your steps and be careful how much you take on. Love will be enhanced if you are open about your feelings and your long-term intentions. What you do for others will be repaid tenfold. ☼☼☼

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on your professional goals. Make calls and present what you can offer to someone who may be able to utilize your services. Don't let an emotional issue with a family member hold you back. ☼☼☼☼☼
